Whether you're hunting out artistic treasures, enjoying the wonderful coastal cuisine or taking in the spectacular views from the hillside terraces, Lisbon is a delight for every group.

Jerónimos Monastery

Highly ornate, this imperious 15th century monastery in Belém is one of the must-see sights of Lisbon. Delicate Gothic details, elaborate portals, Renaissance carvings, and majestic pillars form this breathtaking construction, built following Vasco da Gama's first journey to the Far East. The monastery's grandeur is a celebration of the wealth that Portugal's golden age of exploration brought.

Monserrate Park Palace, Sintra

Wealthy 19th century British industrialist, Francis Cook transformed Monserrate Palace with lush gardens and romantic Moorish architecture combining Gothic and Indian influences. Featuring exquisite lattice carvings, a sacred room with stained glass windows and a succession of stunning marble arches, exotic and foliage motifs on the interior and exterior are reflected in one of the finest Portuguese Botanical Gardens. With a history dating back to the 1500s, the Palace is now owned by the Portuguese government and ranked by UNESCO as a World Heritage Site.

The Gulbenkian

The outstanding Gulbenkian Museum hosts one of the finest collections of classical art in Europe. Donated by the Armenian philanthropist and art collector, Calouste Gulbenkian, this wonderful collection is home to thousands of pieces dating from antiquity to the early 20th century, including Hellenic vases, Chinese porcelain, Art Nouveau and paintings by Rembrandt, Monet and Van Dyck.

Sintra

The National Tile Museum

Lisbon's National Tile Museum traces the history of Portugal's iconic azulejos over five centuries. This unique collection of decorative tiles is housed within the truly magnificent 16th century Madre de Deus Convent, which has richly opulent interiors and glorious, gilt-framed paintings; this unique cultural treasure makes a fascinating visit.

Óbidos

The lovely little town of Óbidos is encircled entirely by its ancient walls. Within, cobbled alleys, whitewashed houses and terracotta roofs are accompanied by pretty churches and shops selling the local liqueur, Ginjinha de Óbidos. This sour cherry brandy is served in a small chocolate cup. The town has also been designated a UNESCO City of Literature thanks to its literary heritage and creative atmosphere.

Sintra

Dreamy Sintra sits amongst verdant wooded hills, a cool respite from the coast with its shady gardens and misty glens. Pretty pastel façades cluster in the historic centre of the town, which is dominated by the pale turrets of the elegant National Palace – historically a summer resort for Portuguese royalty. In addition to its picture-postcard looks, Sintra is dotted with delightful cafés where you can sample the local specialities, travesseiros (almond pastries) and queijadas (cheesecakes).

Evora (incl. the Cathedral & University)

A UNESCO World Heritage site, Évora is the capital of the south-central Alentejo region of Portugal and is widely known for its historic centre, well-preserved streets and Roman buildings. At its heart is the delightful Praça do Giraldo with its tiled paving and pretty arches, and it makes a great starting point from which to uncover the ancient treasures. Main points of interest are the famed Temple of Évora, also called the Temple of Diana, the Roman Baths, medieval walls, the Cathedral and not to be missed, São Francisco church with its skeleton adorned 'Chapel of Bones'.
